News & Updates from CCC

Getting Out in Nature at CCC

Concord Children's Center's educational program is grounded in decades of research demonstrating that the best foundation for a young child's development and future learning is open-ended, child-initiated play. Taking this play outside further increases these benefits and also instills a love of, and appreciation for, nature in our children. Outdoor play is a fundamental part of the CCC program, regardless of the weather, as every parent who has brought home a pair of mud-encrusted snow pants knows all too well.

Inside and Outside the Classroom

Nature is often part of the curriculum at CCC. Our Triangle Room students visit the river throughout the year, documenting what they see each time. At Ripley, the 3-4's have been working on a project to plant and care for flower seeds, and last fall, a couple of our Emerson classrooms painted with pine needs to make beautiful pictures!

In addition to specific curricular units, CCC students have fun outside in all seasons ... playing in the leaves in the fall, following animal prints in the snow in the winter, squishing mud through their fingers in the spring, and running through the sprinkler during the summer.

Professional Development

There are many professional development opportunities addressing the importance of outdoor play for young children, including the following opportunities this year that CCC staff have attended:

- An April workshop around Growing Up Wild, an early childhood education activity guide published by the Massachusetts Department of Fish and Wildlife as part of its Project Wild program. This program aims to assist learners of any age in developing awareness, knowledge, skills and commitment that will result in informed decisions, responsible behavior and constructive actions concerning wildlife, people and the environment.

"Incorporating nature into all aspects of our curriculum -- literacy, numeracy, art, science -- makes these topics so much more exciting and accessible to the kids," said West Concord Program Director Anne Doherty, who attended the workshop.

- Inside and Outside with Nature, a three-part series presented in January by Mass Audubon focusing on how teachers can explore nature with their students both inside and outside the classroom.

Save the Date for an Outdoor Family Concert!

The COVID pandemic has moved social gatherings outside, and over the past two years our children, classrooms and families have taken advantage of the great outdoors to gather safely. In this spirit, we are pleased to announce that on Sunday, June 5, we will be welcoming the children's musical group Rockabye Beats to the Playscape at Ripley for a family lunch concert! The party starts at 11 a.m., and the music starts at 11:30. Bring a picnic lunch and plan to arrive before and/or stay after the concert to give the kids time to explore the Playscape. Thank you to the Boardman family for donating this performance to CCC.
